

25 Dynamite Jobs Featured for Creative Professionals

By Jamie M Downey

Publisher Of THE American Dog Magazine

31. Canine Culinary Chef

With all the current pet food recalls and recalls over the last few years, cooking healthy, nutritious meals for dogs has become big business, and there are a number of high-quality chefs that spend their days in the kitchen whipping up tantalizing treats for Fido!

Check out these amazing pet-friendly chefs:

chef Edward of canine culinary creations at www.canineculinarycreations.com

"I love being a canine chef because my dog treats make you and your dog smile! The puppies I am holding were rescued by us and donated to a service dog company. I received a phone call from one of my customers saying they had 18 puppies from two litters and they needed some major help. We handpicked those five for their great temperaments, I fostered the puppies at my home for a couple of weeks, and now they are helping people in need of a service dog. It makes me smile when we are able to help dogs in need, train them using our treats, and then find them loving homes with our customers. It brings joy to myself and also those who share my love of dogs."

Chef Edward Mac, owner of Canine Culinary Creations (www.canineculinarycreations.com)

Photo by Mike Satoshi Garcia